ONL's Spring 2022 Leadership Lunch Series

Investing in your team has never been more important. This interactive, live educational series is designed to connect nurses, nurse leaders, and teams with contemporary national thought leaders. Sessions are structured to promote the sharing of ideas as speakers provide insights and tools to help nurses and leaders stay informed and inspired. Nurses rave about this program that has become a new ONL favorite. Participants enjoy eating lunch, and having 90 minutes of professional development each month. Registration information below. Space is limited.

Program Schedule

Friday, January 21, 12:00 - 1:30pm

Cynda Rushton PhD, RN, FAAN

Program Title: Cultivating Self-Stewardship as a Leader

Nurses need time to acknowledge, and language to name their experiences over the past two years. This interactive and reflective session will provide a time to identifying what no longer serves us. Together we will explore how we can invest in our own wellbeing.

Friday, February 18, 12:00 - 1:30pm

Renee Thompson DNP, RN, CSP

Program Title: Cultivating a Healthy Workplace by Addressing Disruptive Behaviors

Addressing disruptive behaviors goes a long way toward creating a healthy work environment. Learn the most common mistakes and tested strategies for setting behavioral expectations and holding staff accountable for professional behavior. No matter what your leadership role is on the healthcare team, you will gain confidence to identify and address disruptive behaviors that undermine a culture of safety and respect.

Friday, March 18, 12:00 - 1:30pm

Debbie Stamps EdD, MBA, MS, RN, GNP, NE-BC

Program Title: Recruiting for Outcomes: Community Partnerships to Advance Health Equity

Prioritizing health equity means doing things differently at organizations and within communities. During this interactive session Dr. Stamps will share case examples linking workforce diversity to patient outcomes, and will share strategies for engaging partners to advance and measure health equity.

Friday, April 15, 12:00 - 1:30pm

Lori Armstrong DNP, RN, NEA-BC

Program Title: The Inseparable Link - Nurse Engagement and Patient Safety Outcomes

In a time of unprecedented turnover, nurse engagement has never been more important. Dr. Armstrong will discuss the powerful link between engaged nurse leaders, their staff, and its impact on patient outcomes. This interactive session will also include powerful testimony from an expert Family Advisory Council member as she tells a profound story of engagement from the patient's and family's "bedside" view.
