Looking at Nursing’s Future Through the Looking Glass . . .
And Avoiding Rabbit Holes

Nursing’s moment to shine may be upon us in terms of societal conditions and health care systems forces, but looking at our history, clearly there are potential pitfalls or rabbit holes we must avoid. Shaping the profession’s future will require envisioning new possibilities for nurses’ work, reinventing prelicensure education, postgraduate education, professional development while demonstrating the value of professional nursing. Ultimately, fostering exemplary patient care by creating outstanding practice and academic environments will require skilled and visionary leadership. This session will explore nursing’s preferred future and how we might get there.

Objectives:
Participants will be able to:
• Outline major factors that will influence nursing’s future.
• Describe possible directions for nursing’s future.
• Highlight leadership skills that will shape nursing’s future.
• Describe the value added by professionally educated nurses.

Transforming Organizational Environments: Techniques and Tools

Creating effective strategies to thrive in today’s ever changing health care environment will depend on transforming all aspects of the organization, tapping into authenticity, creativity and innovation. Authentic leaders must understand their personal dynamics and those of the organization. This means being able to lead yourself before you can effectively lead others. This session will explore tools and techniques that enhance leadership consciousness and create an opportunity for participants to create a personal plan to identify their strengths, values and leadership skills.

Objectives:
Participants will be able to:
• Discuss the leadership skill set that supports effective change, creativity, innovation and organizational transformation.
• Discuss how selected tools and techniques enhance leadership consciousness and contribute to creativity and innovation in organizational environments.
• Develop a personal plan to discern strengths, values, and leadership skills.
