

Effective Communication Skills for a Healthier Work Culture

What Nurse Leaders Need to Know

Wednesday, May 29, 2024 · 9:30 a.m. - 12:00 p.m. via Zoom

Ineffective communication is cited as the most common cause of medical error. It's critical for nurse leaders to hone their own communication skills and learn how to develop and foster good communication skills among members of their teams.

This interactive virtual workshop, led by Dr. Renee Thompson, is designed to equip and empower nurse leaders with the essential strategies and techniques needed to foster effective communication, which supports a safe and healthy workforce and helps them lead successful teams.

Participants will:

- Develop their own assertive communication skills
- Gain strategies and techniques for fostering good communication among their teams
- Learn how to incorporate body language techniques to strengthen team relationships
- Create standards and systems that foster collegial relationships among team members
